THE DIPHTHERIA.

New Cases But Not Spreading.

Some six or eight new cases of diphtheria have been reported to the Health Board this week, but they are all confined to homes where other members of the family have had the disease, every case is reported to be a mild one and the patients doing well. On the whole the situation is more hopeful, but the scare has paralyzed business of all kinds, and our neighboring town of Versailles has quarantined against us.

Julia Marlowe Taber.

Since the first appearance of Miss Julia Marlowe at the Opera House in this city several years ago, that charming actress has been established in the hearts of our theatre-goers as their greatest favorite, and it was a source of great disappointment that, coming so near as Louisville, she failed to make a date here this season. Quite a number of people from this city have been to Louisville to see her this week and among the number the writer counts himself fortunate to be included. The competent critics of the Louisville papers have discussed, more aptly than we can hope to do, her various performances; but there is one thing which we can add (knowing from experience), that none of them have said, and that is that so true to nature are her portrayals that a deaf man has no difficulty in keeping up with her part in a comedy which he has never read.

In all her performances which we have witnessed heretofore, Miss Marlowe has selected Shakspearean plays for production, and we were so familiar with their text as to have had but little inconvenience in any event. We had, however, absolutely no knowledge of "The Love Chase;" could scarcely hear a word that was said; and yet her gestures, expression and action were so perfectly natural, so entirely suited to her part, that we scarcely felt the need of the missing sense.

The capacious metropolitan critics, in lamenting the gradual disappearance from the stage of those fine old tragedies and comedies which so deservedly go by the name of legitimate, have taken occasion to add that it is as much due to the lack of artists of sufficient merit to do them justice as to any other reason. To refute this statement in its entirety may be somewhat difficult, but no one who has seen Miss Marlowe will agree that the plays in her repertoire were ever better presented by any actress on the American stage.

Since her last appearance here, which was some little time previous to her long illness, Miss Marlowe has taken on a slight plumpness which made her seem at first sight almost like a stranger to one whose recollection of her painted a fragile, sylph-like figure, more spirit than body. But, as the play progressed, she was seen to have added charm with the added years, and pleasant as are our memories of her as she was, we would not have her otherwise than she is. As one whose pen speaks better than ours can ever do has said, "we do not care to measure by other standards the perfection that is a standard itself." W.

She Alone is Responsible.

A young woman has solved the kissing problem. Here's what she says: "It is thoughtlessly said that man kisses woman, but it is not so. It may be set down as a principle or dogma that it is always the woman who kisses the man. On such occasions man acts only in a responsive and not in an initiative capacity. To produce a kiss only two things are necessary, and man, except by his mere presence, has nothing to do with its origin. The first circumstance is the opportunity, and the second is the desire existing, though unexpressed, in the woman's own heart and mind to be kissed. When these conditions are present, there is sure to be some kissing, for the woman will in a dozen ways that cannot be defined convey the idea to the man, and he, if he be not altogether a stick, will respond to her will. Therefore, in all the cases of true kissing, it is the woman who kisses, and not the man, who simply responds to a power and influence that he cannot resist. That power lies in a woman, and if it is not present there will not be any kissing."

Backward turn backward, O time in your flight, give us a ripsnorting rainstorm to-night. Open the heavenly flood gates I pray; let the rain pour for a night and day; I am so weary of skies that are fair, weary of breathing the dirt in the air; weary of sowing to harvest no gain; give us a rain, minister, give give us a rain—Ex.
